Not illustrated. 1905 Excerpt: ... he openly separated himself, and withdrew the disciples from the Synagogue; and the Christian Church at Ephesus became a distinct body, separated both from the Jews and the Gentiles. As the house of Justus at Corinth⁴ had afforded St. Paul a refuge from calumny, and an opportunity of continuing his public instruction, so here he had recourse to "the school of Tyraunus," who was 'probably a teacher of philosophy or rhetoric, converted by the Apostle to Christianity.⁵ His labors in spreading the gospel were here continued for two whole years. For the incidents which occurred during this residence, for the persons with whom the Apostle became acquainted, and for the precise subjects of his teaching, we have no letters to give us information supplementary to the Acts, as in the case of Thessalonica and Corinth: inasmuch as that which is called the "Epistle to the Ephesians" enters into no personal or incidental details.¹ But we have, in the address to the Ephesian elders at Miletus, an affecting picture of an Apostle's labors for the salvation of those whom his Master came to redeem. From that address we learn that his voice had not been heard within the school of Tyrannus alone, but that he had gone about among his converts, instructing them "from house to house," and warning "each one" of them affectionately "with tears."⁸ The subject of his teaching was ever the same, both for Jews and Greeks,--"repentance towards God, and faith 1 Actt xriii. 4. 1 Acta xix. 8. See in the chapter containing the two "Before the multitude," r. 9. Epistles to the Thessalonians, and in those Acts xriii. 7.
